Crosson Lands Plane at Seattle After Flight from Vancouver

TO RECEIVE ESCORT

Rogers' Family, Enroute to California

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 19.—The bodies of Will Rogers and Wiley Post reached the soil of continental United States today at 9:15 a. m. Pacific standard time, when the Lockheed Electra funeral plane piloted by Joe Crosson arrived at Boeing field from Vancouver, British Columbia.

As the black-curtained plane, with two black streamers floating from the rear cabin, dropped down to earth, the sun suddenly burst forth from the haze, flooding the craft in shining light.

In the name of the city of Vancouver and the dominion, two large wreaths of soft flowers and ferns were laid on the bodies as they rested in Crosson's plane at Vancouver airport.

The flowers were placed in the flying hearse by Vancouver councilmen Harry De Grave and Thomas Wilkinson.

"Vancouver and Canada," said Wilkinson, "join the United States in sorrow at the untimely passing of men who belonged to all of us—to the world—and whose lives were marked by so much accomplishment."

The drive of the transport on which the bodies will be transported from Seattle to the south includes William Winston, pilot, Co-Pilot Fleming and Radioman Dowling, Crosson possibly may "sign on" in order to fly south with the remains of his friends.

To Receive Escort

An aerial escort for the funeral craft has been authorized by the navy department, naval reserve officers at Seattle said, but plans for the escort had not been completed. It had not been decided whether Seattle planes will join the Douglas transport in the flight or whether ships from the San Francisco bay region or southern California will fly north to meet the transport and its tragic cargo. The number of planes also has not been determined.

Crosson was choked with emotion when he set his funeral plane down at Vancouver. He was badly in need of sleep following the arduous 1,700-mile one-stop flight from Fairbanks. He made

REPORT HITS STATE'S FAIR

Sherrill Says Annual Saving of $50,380 Possible; Advises Changes.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 19.—Five days before the 85th annual Ohio State fair is to begin, the Sherrill committee issued a report striking at "inefficient management" of the state fair, and pointed to possible annual economies of $50,380.

The Government survey also showed in its report to the Governor how $68,000 each year can be realized in additional income from a "more business-like handling" of the exhibition.

"Over the last 14 years, the loss (from the fair) has amounted to $1,100,000 which is an average of $78,500 annually," the survey reported. By executive action, recommendations are made so "that the net result will be that the State Fair is no longer a losing venture."

The Sherrill group urged that admission fees for adults be raised to 50 cents, which would provide additional revenue of $40,000 per year. Limiting of free passes to employees, exhibitors and concessionaires also was urged. Last year, 55,000 free passes were issued.

The report recommends that the Fair Manager be appointed by the Director of Agriculture only on recommendation of the State Fair Board and his removal would not be permitted without the consent of the board.

Other recommendations included:

Reduction of employees regularly stationed at the Fair Grounds from 15 to six; use of idle prison labor to repair buildings and grounds; raise prices of grand stand seats to 75 cents and $1.00; and box seats to $1.25; raise fee for concessions and space 25 per cent, to bring in $15,000 additional yearly revenue; require race horse stables be kept in more sanitary condition and increase rental per stall; lease Fair race track and grounds for running races now held elsewhere.

State Begins Collecting "Board" From Prisoners Who Can Afford to Pay

LANSING, Mich., Aug. 19.—Many of the state's convicts—at least 5 per cent of them—are finding that even in jail they must pay their "hotel bills."

A Queer Law

Michigan's new and unique law stipulates that prisoners must pay for their own keep, when able. It threatens to make Balfe MacDonald, Flint problem boy who beat his mother to death with a heavy book-end, its first "victim."

The "Room and Board" law was passed at the recent session of the legislature in order to put "sharp teeth" into criminal statutes. It is estimated by Warden Charles Shean of the Michigan Southern penitentiary that approximately 5 per cent of the entire prison population of the state will be affected by the measure. Its return in dollars and cents still remains to be determined.

Wealthiest Prisoner

Young MacDonald was selected as the first "victim" because he holds the somewhat drab distinction of being the state's wealthiest prisoner.

He is the son of a former Flint bank president, who left a fortune of $3,000,000 when he died. The

PRINCE OF WALES CLOSELY GUARDED

CANNES, France, Aug. 19.—Guards have been doubled around the Prince of Wales, it was revealed today, as a result of the increased tension between Great Britain and Italy over the Abyssinian situation.

Eight detectives from Scotland Yard and a number of agents of the French Surete Generale lurk around his isolated villa, which can be reached only by an underground passageway.

While the Prince has received no threats, it was stated, it was feared some fanatic, sharing Italy's ire over British intervention in the Abyssinian dispute, might try to harm King George's heir. This section of the French Riviera has a large Italian population.

MELL FAVORS GUFFEY BILL

Speaks on Floor of House in Its Favor; Due For House Vote Today.

Congressman Mell G. Underwood, representing the Eleventh Ohio district in congress, has come to the support of the Guffey coal bill on the floors of congress.

With Perry and Hocking-co., two of the counties in his district being dependent largely on the coal industry, the congressman believes the Guffey measure would be to their direct benefit.

The measure, which sets up a "little NRA" for the coal industry, is expected to be passed in the House today.

The measure, alleged by foes to be clearly unconstitutional, does these things:

Declares coal mining to be affected with the public interest, thus setting a precedent for government regulation of other industries.

Creates a national bituminous coal commission of five members, with salaries of $10,000 a year each. Also creates a consumer's counsel and a coal labor board.

Levies a tax of 15 per cent on soft coal, with 90 per cent to be rebated to operators observing the coal code.

Divides the coal areas into 23 districts, authorizes marketing agencies and authorizes minimum prices for coal.

Sets up prohibitions against unfair trade practices.

Sets up machinery to assure workers of rights of collective bargaining.

Judge Adkins Rules Mistrial In Beck-Allen Case as Ellis Commits Breach.

The action of Margaret Beck, Circleville, against Ronald Allen, Laurelville, involving the parentage of a child came to a sudden end in common pleas court Saturday afternoon when Judge J. W. Adkins declared a mistrial on misconduct of a juror.

The judge's action followed information that one of the jurors, Pearl Ellis, Walnut-twp., had lunch Saturday noon at the same table with the defendant, the defendant's wife and a defense witness. The case had been on trial three days and jurors fees alone will cost the county over $100. In a previous trial of the same case a jury disagreed.

E. L. Crist and Tom Renick were attorneys for the plaintiff and Redfern and Lapin, defense attorneys.

GERMAN SPORTSMANSHIP

THE 1936 Olympics in Germany will be a curious spectacle. Inside the massive stadium the Nazi government, which is another way of saying Hitler, promises fair play and no discrimination to any participant, even though he be a Jew or a Catholic. Outside of the stadium—that will be a different matter. There will be no cessation in the vicious persecution of Jews, Catholics, war veterans' organizations, communists, radical or free thinker.

It would be an amusing situation if humanity were not at stake. What good is "sportsmanship" as viewed through the brown-shirt eyes of legal criminals, if it is not carried out in all walks of life? The traditional principles of the Olympics call for a better understanding between all nations, all peoples, all races. The games were created with that purpose in mind. That nothing will be accomplished in the way of better feelings and sportsmanship in Germany, goes without saying. The Nazi government with hand on the heart solemnly vows that everything will be fine. What assurance has an American athlete of Jewish descent that he will be treated courteously even though he tries to take part in this farcical demonstration? And it is of some importance to note that not one Jewish athlete has succeeded in gaining entrance to the German team.

Inside the face of these and other bitter facts, Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic Committee, is firmly resolved that America should participate and has moved to dissolve opposition now flaring again on the heels of the anti-Semitic and anti-Catholic demonstrations in German cities.

PLANNING NEUTRALITY

ON first glance, it seems rather far-fetched to suggest that the Italo-Ethiopian controversy may involve the United States in international difficulties of an embarrassing nature. And yet, it was a minor dispute in the Balkans that brought on the World War.

Official Washington is justified in laying careful plans for the maintenance of strict neutrality in the event of an actual conflict in northern Africa. That is only common sense.

War is the very last thing that the American people want. But it will be well to avoid the inevitable consequences of emulating the ostrich by burying our head in the sands of New World isolation. That policy failed to keep us out in 1917, and it will have the same unfortunate results in 1935 unless accompanied by a realistic and enlightened plan of minding our own business.

Things aren't going so well with the Italian-Ethiopian expedition. They have encountered a temperature of 120 degrees in the shade and to make matters worse, socks knitted by the girl friends are beginning to arrive.

The soldiers in the Alaskan country have found that carrots three feet long are common there. However, being courageous souls, they are determined to make the most of it.

DEVIL'S MANSION

READ THIS FIRST:

Answering a newspaper ad for a companion, pretty Janet Lord finds herself in a big, old house with a mysterious servant named Nita, a blonde who has answers to a mysterious whistle, and an elderly mistress, Miss Bolesvain, who wears a blue chambray around her neck and admits she is peculiar. On the way to the big house Janet met Blair Rodman who came with her in a truck from the village to retrieve his car, which was in the ditch near the Bolesvain house during a terrible storm the night before. Refused shelter there and chased from the house by the dog after his accident, Blair delays his trip west to investigate the mysterious house and satisfy his curiosity. After one night in the house Janet tries to leave but her employer declares the dog will not let her go. During a walk about the grounds Janet sees the face of a girl in one of the high towers of the house. Although beginning to like Miss Bolesvain, everything about her and the great house mystifies Janet. Back in her room, which is barren except for a small cot, Janet opens a note which has been transmitted to her in a napkin. Janet thinks she sees Blair's car from her window and is convinced of it when the headlights go on and off as if to signal her. In the late hours of the evening, she hears someone playing the piano in the study. Janet goes downstairs and finds a man playing the piano. She is startled by a man who looks like a madman followed by loud sobbing. Janet tries to go into the garden house on the spacious grounds but Rajah, the dog, blocks her passage with a vicious snarl. But, as she tries to enter a barn, a strange whistle calls Rajah away. Janet dashes into the house, frightened. Nita does not throw any light on the subject. Janet then goes to Miss Bolesvain. (NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

Miss Bolesvain looked back of Janet often.

CHAPTER 24

"SET DOWN, child," Miss Bolesvain said without turning around as Janet came into the living room. Her voice seemed weaker to Janet than it had been earlier in the morning.

Janet obeyed, the question she had asked Nita still on her lips. She had no time to hurt it out, however, as Miss Bolesvain began to speak.

"Child, I can't help you. I can't think of any way . . . any safe way. You must stay here."

Janet gasped. "Why can't I just leave? Can't you keep Rajah in the house while I go? I'll walk down to Blair's."

"No, I can't think of any safe way," the woman repeated. "I've worried all night, and this morning until my brain's in a whirl. There is no way."

"You don't want me to go!" Janet cried. "We have only a minute or so to take any car out of town. The first thing you must be quiet! What you say is not true. I do want you to go. And if I could let you go, I would."

"Miss Bolesvain, yesterday morning when I was out walking, I saw a face in the east tower window. I know it was Blair's. A hand beckoned me. There is someone else in the house besides the three of us. Tell me who it is!"

The woman closed her eyes again, and rested her head on the back of her chair.

"In the east tower window," she repeated slowly. "The east tower window."

"Yes, who is it?" Janet asked.

"Run into the kitchen and tell Nita to watch!"

Dumbfounded, Janet did, and when she came back, Miss Bolesvain was slipping the arms of her chair, with "come white fingers."

"Nita is watching. We are safe."

"No, no, I like to play." But still she will tap three times with a spoon upon a basin if . . . anyone should come." The woman said this so quickly her words seemed to tumble over each other.

"The face in the tower . . . didn't you hear me say it was too late? Shall we have a game of chess before dinner?"

"Silently Janet went to a small cabinet against the wall and pulled out the board and chessmen. What was Miss Bolesvain going to tell her about the face in the tower? And someone must have come, for Nita had warned them."

The game was just started when Rajah came running into the room, and lay in his usual position at Janet's feet.

Today Miss Bolesvain played badly. She moved a knight without thinking, her mind coming on other things. Janet thought she looked back at her at the big tapestry, often, and very often, and several times, she found herself doing the same thing.

There was nothing unusual about the hanging, except that it was very large, hanging from the ceiling to the floor. Old and frayed at the edges, it depicted a figure being crowned. The figure was out of proportion, but the weaving exquisite. At the bottom a name was woven into the border.

Indeed there were several large tapestries on the wall. But Miss Bolesvain seemed to have no eyes for any except the one directly back of her.

"You're too tired to play, Miss Bolesvain," Janet said after Miss Bolesvain had let several moves go by carelessly. "Perhaps we had better stop."

"No, no, I like to play." But still her thoughts appeared to be far away, although she tried to concentrate on the game.

"Light the fire, child," she said after a while, shivering a little. "I'm deathly cold," and she touched Janet's wrist with icy fingers. With a word Janet lighted the fire. She thought the room very warm herself, and wished she had put on a cool dress in the morning.

"Yes, I'm cold," the woman went on, shaking her red head. "Cold all the time. I haven't a great while to live, child. And when I'm gone, her voice sank into a harsh whisper, "when I'm gone, you'll be mistress of the house!"

Blair Rodman was sitting in his car at the gate marked "Private." He had been there all night long, and in the early hours of the morning had dozed off. Now it was past noon. Nibbling on a couple of dry chicken sandwiches he had had put up at a restaurant the night before in Bolesvain, he was cursing the luck which had kept him outside the gate when he wanted to be inside.

Cursing his sleeplessness which had overtaken him, just when he wanted to be wide awake . . .

Last night he had kept on his lights for hours. He supposed the battery was pretty weak now. It was a pity it would hardly register.

All night he had watched the house from where he sat . . . watched it through a little path the trees made, which gave him a partial view of the west side of the house. He had found the spot late in the night, when he had seen a light shining from a second-story window in the house.

Had he dreamed that he got two signals from this room, every time he flashed off his lights? Feeble signals, he could hardly make out, but signals he was positive. The signals might have come from Janet. That was what he wanted to believe anyway.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

William Powell and Ginger Rogers, in RKO-Radio's "Star of Midnight," bring to the screen perhaps the best of the modern mystery dramas.

Strong in story value, brilliantly enacted, expertly directed and handsomely mounted, the picture fairly exudes class. Sparkling dialogue adds greatly to its thoroughly rounded entertainment.

Powell, as Clay Dalzell, a brilliant attorney who is drawn into the solution of a perplexing mystery; and Miss Rogers, as Donna Mantin, a willful young society beauty who knows the man she wants to marry and how to get him, are seen at their best.

The story centers about the disappearance of Alice Markham, and the sinister complications which ensue. The missing Alice is discovered to be Mary Smith, masked star of a New York revue, but just as her identity is learned, she vanishes again.

AT THE GRAND

Joan Blondell, the blonde boxer, returns to the screen after an interval of several months, in the hilarious First National comedy romance, "Traveling Saleslady," at the Grand Theatre.

Her last previous picture was "Kansas City Princess," after which she retired for a "blessed event," which proved to be a lusty boy.

AT THE CIRCLE

According to the critical opinions expressed by leading newspaper reviewers, the new GB production, "My Heart Is Calling," now the big attraction at the Circle Theatre, has attained a degree of hitherto unprecedented excellence for this type of picture, starring the world-famous young tenor, Jan Kiepura, who captured the hearts of all American moviegoers in his last picture, "Be Mine Tonight."

Poems That Live

MUSIC AT TWILIGHT

O Twilight, Twilight! evermore to hear Thy wounded viols pleading to thy heart!

To dream we watch thy purple wings depart; To wake, and know thy presence always near!

What dost thou on the pathway of the sun?

Abide thy sister Night, while grief so pure Makes heaven and all its beauty seem too sure.

And all too certain thy oblivion.

One star awakes to turn thee from the South.

Oh, linger in the ghazals thou hast drawn.

Ere Night can dew before the feet of Dawn.

Or silence lay her kiss on Music's mouth!

Wind-Up Score Card Predicts Victory for Tax, Banks, Coal Bills

WASHINGTON—Here is the way the insiders who run the show on Capitol Hill privately forecast the wind-up score card: Adjournment — by Saturday night.

Tax Bill—will be passed in a form approximating that adopted by the House, raising about $275,000,000 in additional revenue, and including as major items a new inheritance tax, graduated corporation tax, super-surtaxes on incomes above $1,000,000.

Central Bank Bill—will become law with its most important feature, the open market committee, in a form less drastic than desired by the House but more liberal than proposed by the Senate.

Senator Glass, bitter foe of the measure, while forcing concessions in administrative details, will come out second best in his session-long duel with Federal Reserve Board Governor Marriner S. Eccles, author of the bill.

Guffey Coal Bill—will squeak through, after some sharp trimming, in both houses in the final hours.

Ship Subsidy Bill—Sixty-fourth chance that it will not get through, unless ship building interests behind the bill agree to considerable modification of its more brazen Treasury-raiding provisions.

Neutrality Resolutions—Remote chance that a resolution—with most of its teeth pulled, as desired by the State Department—may be jammed through the Senate. No chance at all that it will get by the House.

Frazier-Lemke Farm Mortgage Refinancing Bill—Dial for the session, but watch its smoke next year.

Holding Company Bill Ninety-to-ten chance that it will get hung up in conference committee. Because of the hair-line margin in the Senate on the "death or tenure" provision, the bill's backers will resist another Senate test during the time two urgently needed votes, Senators J. C. Sizoo and Russ Holt, are in hospitals. Instead the Administration will push it.

Infantile Paralysis

Surgeon General Hugh Cumming walked into the White House recently and advised the President that because of infantile paralysis the Boy Scout Jamboree should be called off.

He mentioned the distressing fact that already there were 88 cases in New York. "The latest figure," said the President, who once suffered from this disease, "is 96."

Returning to the Public Health office, Dr. Cumming found that the President was right.

King Cotton

Roosevelt is being squeezed into an increasingly tight place by that all-powerful monarch of the South, King Cotton.

With this summer's crop rapidly coming on the market, the South is demanding a yes-or-no answer to the question of whether the bill in the House and try to bluff the Representatives into a backdown. But the chances of doing this are practically nil, and as the Administration is not anxious for a Senate test, its later strategy will be to leave the bill in conference in the hope of doing business when Congress reconvenes next January.

On the other hand, Agricultural Secretary Henry Wallace, plus Right Bower Chester Davis, plus all his other cohorts, with equal vehemence oppose a guaranteed price for cotton. They argue that if they set a precedent on this they will have to do the same for wheat, for corn and for tobacco. They see no end of grief ahead, if they yield on cotton.

To this Southern Senators resort that the precedent already was set with last year's 12-cent loan on cotton, that it is too late to turn back.

What is more important, they have pointed out to Roosevelt that no matter how Solid he may think the South is for Democracy, there is one combination that can break it—namely, Huey Long plus the price of cotton.

The President has given indications that he will yield.

In Digestive Troubles Diet Must Be Modified

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE INVALID diet, as we said yesterday, may be modified, but never should violate the requirements of a balanced diet for a normal person.

These requirements are: (1) furnish enough energy to keep the body going; (2) furnish enough material for growth and replacement of tissue waste; (3) furnish enough water; (4) furnish enough inorganic minerals and vitamins; (5) furnish enough to maintain the neutrality of the body; (6) SHOULD furnish enough to be digested without discomfort.

In digestive disturbances we do not have to bother about the energy requirement. This is made up from the starches, sugars, fats and proteins in food. No matter how serious a digestive disturbance is, the patient can practically always digest enough of these foods to give him his energy requirement.

Tissue replacement, which is furnished by the protein in the food (from milk, eggs, and meat), need not be

The opening lead was the 2 of diamonds, and dummy's K won. Trumps had to be led, with only one way possible to take a finesse. The K of hearts won. The second lead of trumps brought out South's 10 over dummy's 6. My J lost to North's Q, but dummy's 9 was established.

North led back the 3 of diamonds, taking out dummy's Ace and leaving a single loser of the suit in dummy—a single trick.

and declaring hand. The first thing to do was to pick up the missing 8 of hearts with dummy's 9. Having attended to that urgent matter, I discarded the 2 of clubs. I had to obtain a diamond discard, by taking two rounds of winning clubs. On the second round I let go my losing diamond. South had followed suit in clubs with the 5 and 7. North had played the 3 and 4, giving me no information of importance.

I decided to discard at least one of my losing clubs upon the good 2 of clubs. As South apparently was long in clubs the chances were in favor of his having the J of that suit, but if North held just three clubs including the J my troubles were over, as I could discard my last losing spade on the good 10 of clubs. I led the Q of clubs and sure enough North's J fell, assuring a fulfillment of my small slam contract and I spread my cards, after discarding my second spade upon dummy's good club.

After the hand was over one of the players remarked: "I would not have played the hand the way you did. I would have overtaken dummy's 9 of hearts with the Ace and led my singleton club, taking the finesse. You would have fulfilled your contract then no matter how many clubs North held." As the cards happened to lie that would have been fine, but suppose I had lost the finesse to South. Then I must have gone down two tricks, as I still held a losing diamond. The way I intended to play the hand in case the J of clubs did not fall would have cost me only a single loser of the suit in dummy—a single trick.

North led back the 3 of diamonds, taking out dummy's Ace and leaving a single loser of the suit in dummy—a single trick.

THE DEVIL'S MANSION

READ THIS FIRST:

Answering a newspaper ad for a companion, pretty Janet Lord finds herself in a big, old house with a speechless servant named Nita, a faithful dog that answers to a mysterious whistle, and an elderly mistress, Miss Boisevain, who wears a blue chameleon around her neck and admits she is peculiar. On the way to the big house Janet met Blair Rodman who came with her in a truck from the village to retrieve his car, mired in the ditch near the Boisevain house during a terrible storm the night before. Refused shelter there and chased from the house by the dog after his accident, Blair delays his trip west to investigate the mysterious house and satisfy his curiosity. After one night in the house Janet tries to leave but her employer declares the dog will not let her go. During a walk about the grounds Janet sees the face of a girl in one of the high towers of the house. Although beginning to like Miss Boisevain, everything about her and the great house mystifies Janet. Back in her room, which is barren except for a small cot, Janet opens a note which has been transmitted to her in a package. Janet thinks she sees Blair's car from her window and is convinced of it when the headlights go on and off as if to signal her. In the late hours of the evening, she hears someone playing the piano in the living room, music played furiously like a maniac, followed by loud sobbing. Janet tries to go into the garden house on the spacious grounds but Rajah, the dog, blocks her passage with a vicious snarl. But, as she tries to enter a barn, a strange whistle calls Rajah away. Janet dashes into the house, frightened. Nita does not throw any light on the subject. Janet then goes to Miss Boisevain.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 24

"SIT DOWN, child," Miss Boisevain said without turning around as Janet came into the living room. Her voice seemed weaker to Janet than it had been earlier in the morning. Janet obeyed, the question she had asked Nita still on her lips. She had no time to blurt it out, however, as Miss Boisevain began to speak.

"Child, I can't help you. I can't think of any way . . . any safe way. You must wait."

Janet gasped. "Why can't I just leave? Can't you keep Rajah in the house while I go? I'll walk down to Boisevain."

"No, I can't think of any safe way," the woman repeated. "I've worried all night, and this morning until my brain's in a whirl. There is no way."

"You don't want me to go!"

"Hush! We have only a minute or so to talk, and you cry out loud the first thing. You must be quiet! What you say is not true. I do want you to go. And if I could let you go, I would."

"Miss Boisevain, yesterday morning when I was out walking, I saw a face in the east tower window. I know I saw it. And a hand beckoned me. There is someone else in the house besides the three of us. Tell me who it is!"

The woman closed her eyes again, and rested her head on the back of her chair.

"In the east tower window," she repeated slowly. "The east tower window . . ."

"Yes, who is it?"

"Run into the kitchen and tell Nita to watch!"

"Dumbfounded, Janet did, and when she came back, Miss Boisevain was ripping the arms of her chair, with 'white fingers' . . ."

"Nita is watching. We are safe."

Miss Boisevain looked back at Janet often.

she will tap three times with a spoon on a basin if . . . anyone should come," the woman said this so quickly her words seemed to tumble over each other. "The face in the tower . . ."

"She stopped suddenly. Three distinct taps came from the kitchen. Janet came running into the room, and she sank back again in her chair, her hands lifeless in her lap. "It is too late."

"You were going to tell me," Janet suggested breathlessly.

"Didn't you hear me say it was too late? Shall we have a game of chess before dinner?"

"Silently Janet went to a small cabinet against the wall and pulled out the board and chessmen. What was Miss Boisevain going to tell her about the face in the tower? And why had she stopped so suddenly? Someone must have come, or Nita had warned them. . . ."

The game was just started when Rajah came running into the room and lay in his usual position at Janet's feet.

Today Miss Boisevain played badly. She moved quickly without thinking, her mind seemingly on other things. Janet thought she looked back at her at the big tapestry often . . ."

Very often, and several times, she found herself doing the same thing. There was nothing unusual about the hanging, except that it was very large, hanging from the ceiling to the floor. Old and frayed at the edges, it depicted a French king being crowned. The figures were out of proportion, but the weaving exquisite. At the bottom a name was woven into the border.

Indeed there were several large tapestries on the walls. But Miss Boisevain seemed to have no eyes for any except the one directly back of her.

"You're too tired to play, Miss Boisevain," Janet said after Miss Boisevain had let several moves go by carelessly. "Perhaps we had better stop."

"No, no. I like to play." But still her thoughts appeared to be far away, although she tried to concentrate on the game.

"Light the fire, child," she said after a while, shivering a little. "I'm deathly cold," and she touched Janet's wrist with icy fingers. Without a word Janet lighted the fire. She thought the room very warm herself, and wished she had put on a cool dress in the morning.

"Yes, I'm cold," the woman went on, shaking her red head. "Cold all the time. I haven't a great while to live, child. And when I'm gone," her voice sank into a harsh whisper, "when I'm gone, you'll be mistress of the house!"

Blair Rodman was sitting in his car at the gate marked "Private". He had been there all night long, and in the early hours of the morning had dozed off. Now it was past noon. Nibbling on a couple of dry chicken sandwiches he had had put up at a restaurant the night before in Boisevain, he was cursing the luck which had kept him outside the gate when he wanted to be inside.

Cursing his sleepiness which had overtaken him, just when he wanted to be wide awake . . .

Last night he had kept on his lights for hours. He supposed the battery was pretty weak now. It was, it would hardly register.

All night he had watched the house from where he sat . . . watched it through a little path the trees made, which gave him a partial view of the west side of the house. He had found the spot late in the night, when he had seen a light shining from a second-story window in the house.

Had he dreamed that he got two signals from this room, every time he flashed off his lights? Feeble signals, he could hardly make out, but signals he was positive. The signals might have come from Janet. That was what he wanted to believe anyway. . . .

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

William Powell and Ginger Rogers, in RKO-Radio's "Star of Midnight," bring to the screen perhaps the best of the modern mystery dramas.

Strong in story value, brilliantly enacted, expertly directed and handsomely mounted, the picture fairly exudes class. Sparkling dialogue adds greatly to its thoroughly rounded entertainment.

Powell, as Clay Dalzell, a brilliant attorney who is drawn into the solution of a perplexing mystery, and Miss Rogers, as Donna Main, a willful young society beauty who knows the man she wants to marry and how to get him, are seen at their best.

The story centers about the disappearance of Alice Markham, and the sinister complications which ensue. The missing Alice is discovered to be Mary Smith, masked star of a New York revue, but just as her identity is learned, she vanishes again.

AT THE GRAND

Joan Blondell, the blonde pepper box, returns to the screen after an interval of several months, in the hilarious First National comedy romance, "Traveling Saleslady," at the Grand Theatre.

Her last previous picture was "Kansas City Princess," after which she retired for a "blessed event," which proved to be a lusty boy.

AT THE CIRCLE

According to the critical opinions expressed by leading newspaper reviewers, the new CB production, "My Heart Is Calling," now the big attraction at the Circle Theatre, has attained a degree of hitherto unprecedented excellence for this type of picture, starting the world-famous young tenor, Jan Kiepura, who captured the hearts of all American moviegoers in his last picture, "Be Mine Tonight."

Poems That Live

MUSIC AT TWILIGHT

O Twilight, Twilight! evermore to hear

Thy wounded lily pleading to thy heart!

To dream we watch thy purple wings depart!

To wake, and know thy presence always near!

What dost thou on the pathway of the sun?

Abide thy sister Night, while grief so pure

Makes heaven and all its beauty seem too sure,

And all too certain her oblivion.

One star awakes to turn thee from the South

Oh, linger in the shadows thou hast drawn,

Ere Night cast dew before the feet of Dawn.

Or Silence lay her kiss on Music's mouth!

Wind-Up Score Card Predicts Victory for Tax, Banks, Coal Bills

WASHINGTON—Here is the way the insiders who run the show on Capitol Hill privately forecast the wind-up score card: Adjournment — by Saturday night.

Tax Bill—will be passed in a form approximating that adopted by the House, raising about $275,000,000 in additional revenue, and including as major items a new inheritance tax, graduated corporation tax, super-surplus on incomes above $1,000,000.

Central Bank Bill—will become law with its most important feature, the open market committee, in a form less drastic than desired by the House but more liberal than proposed by the Senate. Senator Glass, bitter foe of the measure, while forcing concessions in administrative details, will come out second best in his session-long duel with Federal Reserve Board Governor Marriner S. Eccles, author of the bill.

Guffey Coal Bill—will squeak through, after some sharp trimming, in both houses in the final hours.

Ship Subsidy Bill—Sixty-four chance that it will not get through, unless ship building interests behind the bill agree to considerable modification of its more brazen Treasury-raiding provisions.

Neutrality Resolutions—Remote chance that a resolution with most of its teeth pulled, as desired by the State Department—may be jammed through the Senate. No chance at all that it will get by the House.

Frazier-Lemke Farm Mortgage Refinancing Bill—Dad for the session, but watch its smoke next year.

Holding Company Bill—Ninety-to-ten chance that it will get hung up in conference committee. Because of the hair-line margin in the Senate on the "death sentence" provision, the bill's backers will resist another Senate test during the time two urgently needed votes, Senators Dr. Couzens and Rush Holt, are in hospitals. Instead the Administration will push the bill in the House and try to bluff the Representatives into a backdown. But the chances of doing this are practically nil, and as the Administration is not anxious for a Senate test, its later strategy will be to leave the bill in conference in the hope of doing business when Congress reconvenes next January.

Infantile Paralysis

Surgeon General Hugh Cumming walked into the White House recently and advised the President that because of infantile paralysis the Boy Scout jamboree should be called off.

He mentioned the distressing fact that already there were 88 cases in New York.

"The latest figure," said the President, who once suffered from this disease, "is 96."

Returning to the Public Health office, Dr. Cumming found that the President was right.

King Cotton

Roosevelt is being squeezed into an increasingly tight place by that all-powerful monarch of the South, King Cotton.

With this summer's crop rapidly coming on the market, the South is demanding a yes-or-no answer to the question of whether the Government will continue the 12 cents per pound loan on cotton. This, in effect, is a guarantee that the price of cotton will not fall below 12 cents.

Southern Senators have beaten a path to Roosevelt's door with this demand, and what they want is a "yes" answer.

On the other hand, Agricultural Secretary Henry Wallace, plus all his other cohorts, with equal vehemence oppose a guaranteed price for cotton. They argue that if they set a precedent on this they will have to do the same for wheat, for corn and for tobacco. They see no end of grief ahead, if they yield on cotton.

To this Southern Senators report that the precedent already was set with last year's 12-cent loan on cotton, that it is too late to turn back.

What is more important, they have pointed out to Roosevelt that no matter how Solid he may think the South is for Democracy, there is one combination that can break it—namely, Huey Long plus the price of cotton.

The President has given indications that he will yield.

In Digestive Troubles Diet Must Be Modified

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE INVALID diet, as we said yesterday, may be modified, but never should violate the requirements of a balanced diet for a normal person.

These requirements are that diet must (1) furnish enough energy to keep the body going; (2) furnish enough material for growth and replacement of tissue waste; (3) furnish enough water, inorganic mineral salts and vitamins; (4) maintain the neutrality of the body; (5) SHOULD furnish enough bulk; (6) SHOULD be digested without discomfort.

In digestive disturbances we do not have to bother about the energy requirement. This is made up from the starches, sugars, fats and proteins in food. No matter how serious a digestive disturbance is, the patient can practically always digest enough of these foods to give him his energy requirement.

Tissue replacement, which is furnished by the protein in the food (from milk, eggs, and meat), need not be changed in digestive disorders.

In fact, in some of them—for instance, ulcer of the stomach—the protein may be increased because it is comfortably handled and digested by these people.

No change need be made in the water, mineral or vitamin content of the diet in digestive disorders except that in severe diarrheas water is lost very rapidly and may need to be increased.

We need not concern ourselves with the balance between the acid-forming and alkaline-forming foods as we did in diabetes, because the neutrality balance is not likely to be upset in any diet designed for a patient with digestive disorder.

Miss May, Dr. Hosterman Wed At Beautiful Home Ceremony

A WEDDING that will be recorded as a highlight in the social annals of Circleville and Buffalo, N. Y. took place at 7:30 o'clock Saturday evening, when Miss Katharine May and Dr. William Oliver Hosterman were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hosterman of S. Court-st. The nuptial has been the center of much interest in Circleville, for the young couple has long been socially prominent here.

With its floral decorations, the May home, a well-known landmark of this community, was a picturesque setting for the occasion. Clusters of white gladioli and ribbon grass were predominant through the spacious living room.

The wedding ceremony was performed by Rev. L. C. Sherburne of St. Philip's Episcopal church. Immediately preceding the service, a musical program was enjoyed by the wedding guests. Two selections, "I Love You Truly," by Carrie Jacobs Bond and "Beloved, It Is Morn," by Florence Aylward were sung by Mrs. Clark Will accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Ray W. Davis. For the entrance of the bridal party, the music was changed to Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus.

Mrs. Robert Dickerson Workman, Columbus, the bride's sister and matron of honor, was the first to enter. She was gowned in a creation of pale green organza, a cascade of ruffles fashioning the graceful skirt into a short train. Her bouquet was composed of pink roses, asters, and gladioli.

The matron of honor was followed by the bride, who was wearing a lovely gown of pink-tinted ivory satin fashioned princess style, the only trimming of which was dainty cording at the neck and tiny buttons at the sleeves. Flowing from a flat crown of pearls and orange-blossoms was a long tulle veil which covered the train of the gown. The bride carried a handkerchief of Italian lace used by her mother at her own wedding. The bridal bouquet was of white roses and baby's breath with leaves of silver ribbon.

The colonial fireplace at the end of the spacious room formed the altar to which the bride approached on the arm of her father. A background of springer was topped by two large sprays of white gladioli and ribbon grass and in the center a lighted candelabra of seven tapers.

Awaiting his bride was Dr. Hosterman and his best man, Mr. Charles Seelheimer of Buffalo, N. Y.

Mrs. Robert Diekerson Workman, Columbus, the bride's sister and matron of honor, was the first to enter. She was gowned in a creation of pale green organza, a cascade of ruffles fashioning the graceful skirt into a short train. Her bouquet was composed of pink rosebuds, asters, and gladioli.

The matron of honor was followed by the bride, who was wearing a lovely gown of pink-lined ivory satin fashioned princess style, the only trimming of which was dainty cording at the neck and tiny buttons at the sleeves. Flowing from a flat crown of pearls and orange-blossoms was a long tulle veil which covered the train of the gown. The bride carried a handkerchief of Italian lace used by her mother at her own wedding. The bridal bouquet was of white rosebuds and baby's breath with leaves of silver ribbon.

The Colonial fireplace at the end of the spacious room formed the altar to which the bride approached on the arm of her father. A background of springer was topped by two large sprays of white gladioli and ribbon grass and in the center a lighted candelabra of seven tapers.

Awaiting his bride was Dr. Hosterman and his best man, Mr. Charles Seilheimer of Buffalo, N. Y.

HANSON FINANCING IN TOURNEY

Former Pickups Upset Defeating
John Jenkins, Tournament
Favorite.

The field competing for the Pickaway Country club golf championship was reduced to four, Sunday, when Dewey C. Black and Lant Hanson won their quarter-finals matches.

Black performed the surprise of the tournament when he defeated John Jenkins, hard-driving junior member, one up on 19 holes.

Hanson, playing his usual steady game, defeated John Eshelman 6 up and 5 to go.

Jenkins had been the choice for the championship from the start and had been playing good golf but ran into a streak that gave Black the necessary chance to go ahead.

Tied at End of 18
At the end of the first nine Black was leading 3 up. Jenkins started to click on the last nine and by winning the last two holes with the match dromie, brought about a tie at the end of the 18.

Black won No. 19 by parring while Jenkins missed his par putt.

Hanson's victory was never in doubt. Eshelman continuing in the slump which has kept him off his usual form all summer.

Black, defending champion, will play Glen Geib in a semi-final match while Hanson will meet Dr. G. D. Phillips. The matches will probably be played next Sunday.

In the Class A flight, N. E. Reichelderfer turned back Joe P. Noecker 2 up and 1 to go after leading 5 up with only 6 to go.

Noecker fought back hard but could not quite overcome the lead, the match ending on the 17th hole.

Black-Mader Win
In the Sunday mixed partners best ball handicap tournament, Mrs. Dewey C. Black and her nephew, John Mader, led the field with a 29. Mrs. Paul Adkins and John Bragg had 33 and Miss Charlotte Bell and Paul Adkins tallied 34.

Mader was shooting splendid golf Sunday and playing his own ball the entire round had a 34, two below par. Mrs. Black's help was needed on only one hole.

Mrs. Lant Hanson and T. O. Gilman turned in a 30 for second place and Mrs. Bragg and Emil Hrobon scored at 32 for third place.

The regular twilight tournament is scheduled for Tuesday evening with the bi-monthly stag party to be staged Wednesday evening.

Starts Fifteenth Year

GEORGE GAUTHIER
-OHIO WESLEYAN COACH-

When Ohio Wesleyan's football team reports for practice early in September, Coach George Gauthier will be starting his fifteenth season at the helm of the Battling Bishops.

During his 14 years at Delaware Wesleyan, Gauthier's teams have played 124 games, winning 83, tying six, and losing 35, for an average of more than .700. This would be considerably higher if his first year weren't taken into consideration. That was in 1921 when the Bishops, who had been playing hit-and-miss football for several years, won only one game. But under Gauthier's system they staged a complete reversal of form in the following season, losing only one game.

Gauthier is short of stature and as a result has been called "the little giant of Ohio football." Back in college at Michigan State, then Michigan Aggies, Gauthier went out for football but the coach advised him to quit. "You'll get hurt," he said. But Gauthier won a first-team position and became a great quarterback. He played on a team which defeated, among others, Michigan and Ohio State.

He spends his summer vacations in Canada fishing, but finds time there to map out plays for his gridirers. He is already equipped with some new formations with which he hopes his boys will be among the contenders for the Buckeye conference championship.

About THIS and THAT

By the Second Guesser

New Deal for Jackson

Jackson-ship is due for a new deal in athletics—Robert Terhune, who becomes principal and coach succeeding G. J. Lampl, has moved to town preparatory to taking up his work—He has been serving as assistant coach at Bloomingburg high school.

Was Boxing Champ

Terhune was heavyweight boxing champion at Ohio State university in his senior year—1933. He was a member of the OSU football and wrestling squads and when he attended Purdue university one year won numerals in football, basketball and track; so he knows what it is all about.

Two Cities Complete

It will be Columbus versus Circleville in the semi-final matches of the Pickaway Country club championship tournament—Dewey Black, defending champion, a resident of Columbus, will meet Glen Geib, while Lant Hanson, also a Columbusite, tangles with Dr. G. D. Phillips in the other match—Both Black and Hanson are favored to play in the finals.

Although they live in Columbus both men spend about as much time here as they do in their home city.

What of Ball Loop?

When, oh when, will the recreation ball loop be resumed—The Commons field is ready for play at any time and a lot of athletes are ready to go—It is doubtful if the SOE electric field will be playable again this year.

BIRDS FALL TO BREWERS

Double Loss Drops Columbus Team Far Behind League-Leading Millers.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 19.—Minneapolis held an assuming advantage today in the American Association pennant race by downing the last-place Louisville Colonels twice in a double-header while Indianapolis remained idle because of rain and Columbus dropped two to Milwaukee.

The Millers were five and one games in front of the second-place Indians and six contests removed from the third-place Red Birds.

The Birds lost the opener to the Brewers 8 to 4, and then watched Milwaukee push two runs across in the ninth to take the nightcap, 4 to 3.

The Millers downed Louisville, 8 to 1, in the opener and came back with a 3 to 1 conquest.

Toledo dropped Kansas City in a twin bill, taking the first, 9 to 2, and the second contest, 5 to 4, in a 10-inning affair.

SUDDEN DEATH ENDS CAREER OF WILLAMAN

Former Ohio State Coach Dies
In Cleveland Hospital;
Mentor at Reserve.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 19.—Death today had brought a sudden end to the career of one of Ohio's best known men of athletics—Sam S. Willaman, football director at Western Reserve university here, and former head football coach at Ohio State university.

Willaman, who was 45 years old, died yesterday at Lakeside hospital following an emergency operation and blood transfusion.

He had been in ill health for about eight months, but his condition was not regarded as serious until 10 days ago. Suffering from a chronic intestinal ailment, Willaman was taken seriously ill while on a fishing trip in Canada with Mrs. Willaman and some friends.

The party returned to Cleveland last Tuesday and Willaman was taken to the hospital, where an operation was performed Saturday night. He died two hours later after a blood transfusion had been given by Dr. Cyril (Spike) Surlington, former Ohio State grid star.

Record at Reserve
Willaman came to Western Reserve a year ago after resigning his post at Ohio State, where he had been head football coach for five years. His resignation at Western conference school followed a campaign of criticism directed by the so-called "downtown coaches" in Columbus because of successive defeats at the hands of powerful University of Michigan teams.

During his first season at Western Reserve last year, Willaman turned out one of the most successful college teams in this city's history.

In 1922, Willaman went to Iowa State college as head football coach, and in 1926 returned to his Alma Mater to serve as Dr. Wilce's chief assistant. Willaman succeeded Wilce after the latter had resigned in 1928.

Among the Ohio State stars Willaman is credited with developing are Wesley Foster, All-American end; Dick Larkins, Joe Galus, Regis Monahan, Carl Cramer and others.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock in a chapel on the Western Reserve campus here, after which the body will be taken to Salem.

Willaman, who was born in Salem, O., attended Ohio State in 1911 and 1913, and played on the varsity football team. He started as fullback on the 1931 team, when the Buckeyes made their Big Ten debut, playing under Dr. John W. Wilce, whom Willaman later succeeded as coach.

He began his coaching career in 1914 after being graduated with degrees in mechanical and electrical engineering, going to Alliance high school at Alliance, where he remained until 1918. He then was appointed coach at Cleveland East Tech high school, where he made a record which has been enviable in this city's athletic history.

Loosing lions on the foe, as Ethiopian tribesmen are reported planning, is all right, but why don't they just push a picture of Mussolini at the Italian cannon fodder every time they get some dog food? Having to give the fascist salute in the midst of spaghetti would be the height of frightfulness.

BLACK, HANSON ADVANCING IN GOLF TOURNEY

Former Pulls Upset Defeating
John Jenkins, Tournament
Favorite.

The field competing for the Pickaway Country club golf championship was reduced to four, Sunday, when Dewey C. Black and Lent Hanson won their quarter-finals matches.

Black performed the surprise of the tournament when he defeated John Jenkins, hard-driving junior member, one up on 19 holes.

Hanson, playing his usual steady game, defeated John Eshelman 6 up and 5 to go.

Jenkins had been the choice for the championship from the start and had been playing good golf but ran into a streak that gave Black the necessary chance to go ahead.

Tied at End of 18

At the end of the first nine Black was leading 3 up. Jenkins started to click on the last nine and by winning the last two holes with the match drome, brought about a tie at the end of the 18.

Black won No. 19 by parring while Jenkins missed his par putt. Hanson's victory was never in doubt, Eshelman continuing in the slump which has kept him off his usual form all summer.

Black, defending champion, will play Glen Geib in a semi-final match while Hanson will meet Dr. G. D. Phillips. The matches will probably be played next Sunday.

In the Class A flight, N. E. Reichelderfer turned back Joe P. Noecker 2 up and 1 to go after leading 5 up with only 6 to go. Noecker fought back hard, but could not quite overcome the lead, the match ending on the 17th hole.

Black-Mader Win

In the Sunday mixed partners best ball handicap tournament, Mrs. Dewey C. Black and her nephew, John Mader, led the field with a 29. Mrs. Paul Adkins and John Bragg had 33 and Miss Charlotte Bell and Paul Adkins trailed 34.

Mader was shooting splendid golf Sunday and playing his own ball the entire round had a 34, two below par. Mrs. Black's help was needed on only one hole.

Mrs. Lent Hanson and T. O. Gilliland turned in a 30 for second place and Mrs. Bragg and Emil Hobson scored at 32 for third place.

The regular twilight tournament is scheduled for Tuesday evening with the bimonthly stag party to be staged Wednesday evening.

PROS PREPARING FOR STAR TILT

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—At the half-way mark in their training grind, the All-American football players assembled here at Evanston today turned to the job of polishing up the timing and execution of offensive plays to be used against the Chicago Bears in professional eleven Aug. 29.

Having drilled on the fundamentals of attack for eleven practice sessions, today were assigned to the work of smoothing out the plays and formations assigned them by the coaches. Later in the week the squad will labor on defensive problems.

The all-star squad rested yesterday while the Bears, in training at Delafield, Wis., split into two opposing camps for a 40 minute battle that saw John Sisk and William Pollock lead the Orange team to a 13 to 0 victory over the Whites.

GEORGE
-OHIO WESLEYAN COACH-

When Ohio Wesleyan's football team reports for practice early in September, Coach George Gauthier will be starting his fifteenth season at the helm of the Battling Bishops.

During his 14 years at Delaware Gauthier's teams have played 124 games, winning 83, tying six, and losing 35, for an average of more than 700. This would be considerably higher if his first year weren't taken into consideration.

That was in 1921 when the Bishops, who had been playing hit-and-miss football for several years, won only one game. But under Gauthier's system they staged a complete reversal of form in the following season, losing only one game.

Gauthier is short of stature and as a result has been called "the little giant of Ohio football." Back in college at Michigan State, then Michigan Aggies, Gauthier went out for football but the coach advised him to quit. "You'll get hurt," he said. But Gauthier won a first-team position and became a great quarterback. He played on a team which defeated, among others, Michigan and Ohio State.

He spends his summer vacations in Canada fishing, but finds time there to map out plays for his gridgers. He is already equipped with some new formations with which he hopes his boys will be among the contenders for the Buckeye conference championship.

New Deal for Jackson

Jackson-2 up is due for a new deal in athletics—Robert Terhune, who becomes principal and coach succeeding G. J. Lampl, has moved to town preparatory to taking up his work. He has been serving as assistant coach at Bloomingburg high school.

Was Boxing Champ

Terhune was heavyweight boxing champion at Ohio State university in his senior year—1933. He was a member of the OSU football and wrestling squads and when he attended Purdue university one year won numerals in football, basketball and track; so he knows what it is all about.

Two Cities Compete

It will be Columbus versus Circleville in the semi-final matches of the Pickaway Country club championship tournament—Dewey Black, defending champion, a resident of Columbus, will meet Glen Geib, while Lent Hanson, also a Columbusite, tangles with Dr. G. D. Phillips in the other match—Both Black and Hanson are favored to play in the finals.

Although they live in Columbus both men spend about as much time here as they do in their home city.

What of Ball Loop?

When, oh when, will the recreation ball loop be resumed—The Commons field is ready for play at any time and a lot of athletes are ready to go—It is doubtful if the SOElectric field will be playable again this year.

BIRDS FALL TO BREWERS

Double Loss Drops Columbus Team Far Behind League-Leading Millers.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 19.—Minneapolis held an assuming advantage today in the American Association pennant race by downing the last-place Louisville Colonels twice in a double-header while Indianapolis remained idle because of rain and Columbus dropped two to Milwaukee.

The Millers were five and one games in front of the second-place Indians and six contests removed from the third-place Red Birds.

The Birds lost the opener to the Brewers 8 to 4, and then watched Milwaukee push two runs across in the ninth to take the nightcap, 4 to 3.

The Millers downed Louisville, 8 to 1, in the opener and came back with a 3 to 1 conquest.

Toledo dropped Kansas City in a twin bill, taking the first, 9 to 2, and the second contest, 5 to 4, in a 10-inning affair.

COON DOG EVENT PLANNED OCT. 6

SUDDEN DEATH ENDS CAREER OF WILLAMAN

Former Ohio State Coach Dies
In Cleveland Hospital;
Mentor at Reserve.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 19.—Death today had brought a sudden end to the career of one of Ohio's best known men of athletics—Sam S. Willaman, football director at Western Reserve university here, and former head football coach at Ohio State university.

Willaman, who was 45 years old, died yesterday at Lakeside hospital following an emergency operation and blood transfusion. He had been in ill health for about eight months, but his condition was not regarded as serious until 10 days ago. Suffering from a chronic intestinal ailment, Willaman was taken seriously ill while on a fishing trip in Canada with Mrs. Willaman and some friends.

The party returned to Cleveland last Tuesday and Willaman was taken to the hospital, where an operation was performed Saturday night. He died two hours later after a blood transfusion had been given by Dr. Cyril (Spike) Surington, former Ohio State grid star.

Record at Reserve

Willaman came to Western Reserve a year ago after resigning his post at Ohio State, where he had been head football coach for five years. His resignation at Western conference school followed a campaign of criticism directed by the so-called "downtown coaches" in Columbus because of successive defeats at the hands of powerful University of Michigan teams.

During his first season at Western Reserve last year, Willaman turned out one of the most successful college teams in this city's history.

In 1922, Willaman went to Iowa State college as head football coach, and in 1926 returned to his Alma Mater to serve as Dr. Wilce's chief assistant. Willaman succeeded Wilce after the latter had resigned in 1928.

Developed Stars

Among the Ohio State stars Willaman is credited with developing are Wesley Fesler, All-American end; Dick Larkins, Joe Gailus, Regis Monahan, Carl Cramer and others.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock in a chapel on the Western Reserve campus here, after which the body will be taken to Salem.

Willaman, who was born in Salem, O., attended Ohio State in 1911 and 1913, and played on the varsity football team. He starred as fullback on the 1931 team, when the Buckeyes made their Big Ten debut, playing under Dr. John W. Wilce, whom Willaman later succeeded as coach.

He began his coaching career in 1914 after being graduated with degrees in mechanical and electrical engineering, going to Alliance high school at Alliance, where he remained until 1918. He then was appointed coach at Cleveland East Tech high school, where he made a record which has been enviable in this city's athletic history.

Loosing lions on the foe, as Ethiopian tribesmen are reported planning, is all right, but why don't they just push a picture of Mussolini at the Italian cannon fodder every time they get some dog food? Having to give the fascist salute in the midst of spaghetti would be the height of frightfulness.

PATTERN 5355

When it comes to hats this fall, the picked favorite is the beret - and in every shape and size! Matching accessories are going to be better than ever, too, especially when they're as smart, practical and durable as this set, in hand crocheted. The softly drooping beret - its gathered brim is not only the thing but is softly flattering as well - looks most professional, though it's easy to make. The square, roomy, pouch purse repeats the gathered effect. Both accessories have as their main decoration, rows of popcorns that add much interest. Made of yarn to blend with your fall dresses, you'll find this hat and purse the most popular in your wardrobe. In pattern 5416 you will find complete instructions for making the set shown; an illustration of it and of the stitches needed; material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Herald Household Arts Dept., 124 W. Main-st., Cincinnati, O.

PATTERN 9511

Hunt up that bit of left-over lace or metallic cloth. It's just the thing to dress up this attractive afternoon frock for the larger woman. The deeply pointed V-neck detracts from a heavy bust, and the saddle-shoulder effect flowing into the interesting sleeves will make even you forget your arms are over-plump. Oblique-angled seams give a slim look to the hips. Use satin-back crepe, in one of the rich new shades, the crepe side for the major portion of the dress, satin side for collar and bow. Crepe or sheer are effective, too! Complete, Diagrammed Marian Martin Sew Chart included.

Pattern 9511 may be ordered only in sizes 16, 18, 20, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 36 requires 4 1/2 yards 39 inch fabric and 1/4 yard 18 inch lace.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for EACH MARIAN MARTIN pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE of each pattern. PATTERN 5355

When it comes to hats this fall, the picked favorite is the beret—and in every shape and size! Matching accessories are going to be better than ever, too, especially when they're as smart, practical and durable as this set, in hand crocheted. The softly drooping beret—its gathered brim is not only the thing but is softly flattering as well—looks most professional, though it's easy to make. The square, roomy, pouch purse repeats the gathered effect. Both accessories have as their main decoration, rows of popcorns that add much interest. Made of yarn to blend with your fall dresses, you'll find this hat and purse the most popular in your wardrobe.

In pattern 5416 you will find complete instructions for making the set shown; an illustration of it and of the stitches needed; material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Herald Household Arts Dept., 124 W. Main-st., Circleville, O.

Better Housing News

Reels To Be Shown

The first of a series of motion pictures depicting the various phases of home and commercial modernization, as well as home construction, will soon be shown at the Grand theatre. These pictures carry the general title "Better Housing News Flashes" and are released under the auspices of the Federal Housing Administration, Washington.

The young man who has his father's unruly shock of hair and drawl, emphasized:

STATE BEGINS

estate, however, dwindled to approximately $500,000 by 1933 and Balle's share of it, together with $40,000 he received from his mother's estate of $240,000, left him with a personal bank account and estate of approximately $300,000.

Mrs. Grace MacDonald, his socialite mother, was found beaten to death in her mansion at Flint on May 27, 1933.

Quarrel Over Money

After a 13-day nationwide police hunt, young MacDonald was arrested with a companion at Nashville, Tenn., and returned to Flint. He finally admitted he had struck and killed his mother with a book-end during a quarrel over money and her refusal to give him the keys to her automobile.

Authorities began preparations to prosecute him on a first degree murder charge and attorneys for the youth immediately conceived what was known at the time as a "million dollar insanity defense."

Finally, however, MacDonald pleaded guilty to manslaughter and was sentenced to a 10-to-20 year term. This means that he will serve from 7 1/2 to 15 years. He was 17 years old then. He is 19 now.

He was sent to the state prison on Aug. 21, 1933.

Prisoner's "Board Bill"

Counsel for auditor general of the state, John J. O'Hara, recently filed a "bill" in circuit court at Flint for $464 for MacDonald's keep to date. The petition cites that MacDonald's prison fare costs from 52 to 90.5 cents per day.

In addition, MacDonald is allowed to spend $6 of his money every month the same privilege that is granted to all convicts. MacDonald's dentist also gets $15 a month—the youth has trouble with his teeth—and he spends $3 a month for draftsmanship lessons.

Other prisoners will be named in similar suits as soon as it can be ascertained whether they have any personal estate, state officials say.

The three said they found the body five miles downstream from where the boy tumbled into the river while trying to catch fish with his hands.

PEACE PARLEY

Then, if Italy persists in her Ethiopian offensive, Britain will not shrink from calling for league "sanctions."

Takes War Precaution

Other steps Britain contemplates include consultation with the United States in the event of war, lifting of her arms export embargo, strengthening of her defenses around Abyssinia, and maintaining the Mediterranean fleet at top strength.

Premier Pierre Laval of France is also understood to have swung more to the British point of view, and may support Britain when the League meets in a session that may mean its death.

Britain, with Ethiopia's acquiescence, offered Italy economic predominance under a League commission and some territorial concessions.

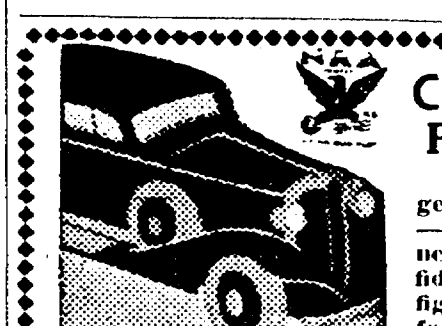

Italy demanded cession of the Abyssinian lowlands, a protectorate over the remainder of the country, and military occupation.

Differ on Partition

Italy argued that the three-powers treaty of 1906 called for partition of Abyssinia, and that economic and political control of Abyssinia would be "unreal" without military power. Britain replied that the "partition" was meant to be economic only, and that Emperor Haile Selassie would not tolerate a military occupation.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Will Rogers' family remained in seclusion while their private car passed through here today on their sad homeward journey.

Will Rogers, Jr., announced that public funeral services in Los Angeles Thursday morning will be followed by private services in the afternoon. Indicating that Mrs. Rogers is nearly prostrated with grief, he added:

"The body will rest in a vault in Forest Lawn Memorial park until mother is able to travel with it to Claremore, Okla., for the burial."

Dorothy Stone, actress, and Frank Phillips, Oklahoma oil man, accompanied the family.

The young man who has his father's unruly shock of hair and drawl, emphasized:

"The accident will not keep me from flying. Unfortunately as it was, we are not allowing ourselves to be embittered. We came by train because it gave mother more time for rest. She has been lying down nearly all the time since we left New York."

The party was to be joined at Kansas City by Rogers' sister, Mrs. Thomas McSpadden of Claremore. They will arrive in Los Angeles Wednesday.

Parents of Drowned

Infant Being Hunted

MT. VERNON, Aug. 19.—Knox-co authorities today instituted a search for persons who tied a new-born babe to a tree limb with wire and submerged it in the Kokosing river near here.

Three small boys, Harold Jerew, Leonard Everett and Arthur Freyman, discovered the body of the infant boy while playing along the river bank.

The sheriff said apparently the child was alive when abandoned to die.

KINGSTON STUDIES SEWAGE PROJECT

KINGSTON, Aug. 19.—Village officials today were taking first steps toward the installation of a complete storm sewer system.

An engineering firm will be asked to prepare plans and estimates for the project and when completed they will be presented to Ross-co WPA headquarters for approval and federal aid.

During the summer heavy rains have flooded yards and cellars and officials believe the only remedy is the installation of a sewer system.

STATE BEGINS

estate, however, dwindled to approximately $500,000 by 1933 and Balfie's share of it, together with $40,000 he received from his mother's estate of $240,000, left him with a personal bank account and estate of approximately $300,000.

Mrs. Grace MacDonald, his socialite mother, was found beaten to death in her mansion at Flint on May 27, 1933.

Quarrel Over Money

After a 13-day nationwide police hunt, young MacDonald was arrested with a companion at Nashville, Tenn., and returned to Flint. He finally admitted he had struck and killed his mother with a book-end during a quarrel over money and her refusal to give him the keys to her automobile.

Authorities began preparations to prosecute him on a first degree murder charge and attorneys for the youth immediately conceived what was known at the time as a "million dollar insanity defense."

Finally, however, MacDonald pleaded guilty to manslaughter and was sentenced to a 10-to-20 year term. This means that he will serve from 7½ to 15 years. He was 17 years old then. He is 19 now.

He was sent to the state prison on Aug. 21, 1933.

Prisoner's "Board Bill"

Counsel for auditor general of the state, John J. O'Hara, recently filed a "bill" in circuit court at Flint for $464 for MacDonald's keep to date. The petition cites that MacDonald's prison fare costs from 52 to 99.5 cents per day.

In addition, MacDonald is allowed to spend $6 of his money every month—the same privilege that is granted to all convicts. MacDonald's dentist also gets $15 a month—the youth has trouble with his teeth—and he spends $3 a month for draftsmanship lessons.

Other prisoners will be named in similar suits as soon as it can be ascertained whether they have any personal estate, state officials say.

BODY OF YOUTH, 7, FOUND IN SCIOTO

The body of Norman Eader, 7, Columbus boy who drowned in the Scioto river Aug. 9, was found Sunday by three Shadaville residents; Howard Gernem, Aaron Harter and William Athey.

The three said they found the body five miles downstream from where the boy tumbled into the river while trying to catch fish with his hands.

Soldiers of Fort Hayes joined in the hunt for the boy's body after an appeal was made to President Roosevelt by the child's parents. A $50 reward was offered for the body.

PEACE PARLEY

Continued From Page One

Then, if Italy persists in her Ethiopian offensive, Britain will not shrink from calling for league "sanctions."

Takes War Precaution

Other steps Britain contemplates include consultation with the United States in the event of war, lifting of her arms export embargo, strengthening of her defenses around Abyssinia, and maintaining the Mediterranean fleet at top strength.

Premier Pierre Laval of France is also understood to have swung more to the British point of view, and may support Britain when the League meets in a session that may mean its death.

Britain, with Ethiopia's acquiescence, offered Italy economic predominance under a League commission and some territorial concessions.

Italy demanded cession of the Abyssinian lowlands, a protectorate over the remainder of the country, and military occupation.

Differ on Partition

Italy argued that the three-powers treaty of 1906 called for partition of Abyssinia, and that economic and political control of Abyssinia would be "unreal" without military power. Britain replied that the "partition" was meant to be economic only, and that Emperor Haile Selassie would not tolerate a military occupation.
